Storm-Dependent

Unpredictable demand, highly weather-dependent, long sales cycles. At 15% commission on a $8,000 job that is $1,200 to QuackQuotes per job which may face contractor pushback. Come back to this niche once the platform has proof of delivery.

Revenue Split Analysis

An honest breakdown of whether QuackQuotes' current pricing tiers work for contractors and the business.

Under $200	35%	Verdict: Too high for this tier. On a $150 pest control treatment, QuackQuotes takes $52.50 and the contractor keeps $97.50. For a job that costs them gas, time, and supplies, that margin will feel painful. This is the tier most likely to cause contractor churn or complaints. Compare to Thumbtack charging $15-75 per lead upfront regardless of win. The no-upfront-cost advantage softens it, but 35% is still aggressive on small jobs. Recommendation: Drop to 28-30% for sub-$200 jobs.

$200-$600	25%	Verdict: Solid. This is the sweet spot. On a $400 pressure washing job, QuackQuotes takes $100 and the contractor pockets $300. That feels fair when they paid nothing upfront, faced no lead cost, and just showed up with a quote. This tier covers the majority of pest control, gutter cleaning, junk removal, and pressure washing jobs. Most contractors will accept this without pushback. Recommendation: Keep at 25%. This tier is well-positioned.

Over $600

15%

Verdict: Good, but consider adding a cap. On a $1,000 electrical job, 15% is $150 to QuackQuotes. That is reasonable. But if this tier reaches into roofing or HVAC replacement territory ($6,000-12,000 jobs), 15% becomes $900-1,800 per job which will face serious contractor resistance. Adding a maximum dollar cap ($300 max commission on any single job) would remove that friction while still protecting high-ticket revenue.

Recommendation: Add a $300 commission cap on any single job for jobs above $2,000.

OVERALL VERDICT

The model is fundamentally strong. Paying only on a win is a genuinely better deal than Angi, HomeAdvisor, or Thumbtack for contractors. The percentage structure just needs small adjustments: lower the sub-$200 tier slightly and add a high-ticket cap. With those tweaks this becomes one of the most contractor-friendly pricing models in the home services space.

SECTION 03

Grand Slam Offers

Built on Hormozi's value equation: Dream Outcome x Likelihood of Achievement, divided by Time Delay x Effort. The goal is to make saying no feel stupid.

OFFER 01 – PRIMARY

Get Paid First. Pay Us Second.

9.5/10

The full pitch: "Join QuackQuotes for free. We run ads, collect job requests from homeowners in your area, and put your profile, your price, and your reviews in front of them. You only pay us a percentage of the job after the customer pays you. If you don't win, you pay nothing. Not a cent. Not ever."

Why this is a Grand Slam: Every objection a contractor has is dead on arrival. "What if it doesn't work?" You pay nothing. "What if I can't afford it?" There is nothing to afford. "What if the leads are bad?" You don't pay for bad leads. The risk is completely reversed. The only thing a contractor has to lose by joining is time spent writing a quote. That is it. Hormozi calls this making the "offer so good people feel stupid saying no." This is that offer.

Apply to: All niches. All ads. This is the lead offer in every hook, every body script, and every static ad. Never bury this. Lead with it.

OFFER 02 – LAUNCH INCENTIVE

Your First 3 Wins Are Commission-Free

9/10

The full pitch: "The first three jobs you win through QuackQuotes, we take zero commission. You keep every dollar. After that, the normal percentage kicks in only when you win and get paid."

Why this works: It collapses the time between joining and trusting. Most contractors will not believe the platform works until they see it work. The first three wins are proof. Once a contractor has won three jobs through you with zero commission taken, they are already trained to use the platform. By the time commission starts they have momentum and they already trust you. Use this as a limited-time launch offer for the first wave of contractors in each niche. Scarcity makes it urgent. "We are only doing this for the first 20 pest control operators who join in Raleigh."

Apply to: Launch campaigns. First 30 days in each new niche. Mention in the body script, not the hook. The hook leads with Offer 01.

OFFER 03 - OBJECTION KILLER

We Build Your Profile For You. For Free.

8/10

The full pitch: "Join QuackQuotes and we set up your entire profile for you. We write your bio, pull your reviews, and get you live and ready to receive job requests in under 24 hours. You do nothing except approve it."

Why this works: The number one reason someone does not sign up for a new platform is friction. They think it is going to take time, effort, and technical skill they do not have. Removing setup removes the last excuse. This bonus, added on top of Offer 01, makes the value stack feel absurd. "You pay nothing to join. You pay nothing if you don't win. And we even build your profile for you." Hormozi calls these "bonuses that remove obstacles to the result."

Apply to: Retargeting ads. Contractors who clicked but didn't sign up. Mention in the body script as a bonus, not a primary offer.

OFFER 04 - LONG GAME

We Turn Every Job Into a 5-Star Review. Automatically.

7.5/10

The full pitch: "Every job you complete through QuackQuotes triggers an automatic review request to the customer with a direct link to your Google page. Most businesses beg for reviews and get ignored. We send it for them while the job is still fresh in the customer's mind. Your reviews grow while you sleep."

Why this works: Google reviews are the lifeblood of a local home service business. Getting more of them is something every contractor wants but none of them have a system for. This offer speaks to long-term business growth, not just immediate jobs. It is not a lead generation offer. It is a business building offer. Use it to close contractors who are skeptical about the platform by showing them what they get beyond just the jobs.

Apply to: Sales calls. Follow-up messages. The third or fourth touchpoint when the contractor has not yet signed up.

OFFER 05 — COMPARISON CLOSE

The Math Against Angi

8/10

The full pitch: "The average pest control company on Angi spends $300-$800 per month on leads. They win about 20-30% of those leads. That means they are paying $100-$400 per job acquired, before they even show up. With QuackQuotes, they pay zero upfront and 25% on jobs they win in the $200-$600 range. On a $300 job that is $75. They are paying $75 instead of $400. And only when they win."

Why this works: Hormozi calls this the "comparison to alternative" close. You are not just selling QuackQuotes. You are showing contractors the math of their current situation and making it feel painful to stay there. This is especially powerful in the body script after you have already hooked them with Offer 01. Use real numbers. Specificity converts.

Apply to: The body of UGC ads. The second half of the script after the hook has landed. Works best on problem-aware contractors who already know they are wasting money on Angi or Thumbtack.

SECTION 04

Guarantees

Hormozi's rule: the guarantee should make it feel irrational to say no. The stronger the guarantee, the higher the price you can charge and the faster people move. Graded on boldness, believability, and risk to QuackQuotes.

GUARANTEE 01 – USE THIS ONE

"If You Don't Win, You Don't Pay. Ever."

10/10

This is not a guarantee. It is the business model. And that is exactly what makes it so powerful. The guarantee and the offer are the same thing, which means it is 100% believable and 100% true. No fine print. No conditions. If a contractor does not win a job, they owe QuackQuotes literally zero dollars. Say this in every ad, on every landing page, and in every sales conversation. Say it more than once. Most people do not believe it the first time.

Risk to QuackQuotes: Zero. This costs nothing to promise because it is already how the platform works.

GUARANTEE 02

"5 Real Job Opportunities in 30 Days or We Work for Free"

8.5/10

We guarantee your profile will receive at least 5 legitimate quote requests from homeowners in your niche within 30 days of joining. If we fall short, your commission rate drops to zero for the following 30 days on every job you win. This is a strong guarantee because it puts delivery on us, not the contractor. It also forces QuackQuotes to actually run ads aggressively in that niche, which is a good internal forcing function.

Risk to QuackQuotes: Low-Medium. Only activate this guarantee once ads are consistently producing in a niche. Do not promise this on day one.

GUARANTEE 03

"More Opportunities Than Angi in 60 Days or Your Next 5 Wins Are Free"

7.5/10

We will show your profile to more homeowners than Angi would have sent you leads for the same 60-day period. If we don't, your next 5 won jobs are commission-free. This is a direct comparison guarantee and it is bold. The math almost always favors QuackQuotes because Angi charges per lead regardless of outcome so contractors get fewer leads per dollar spent. This guarantee works especially well on contractors who are currently paying Angi and frustrated with the results.

Risk to QuackQuotes: Medium. Requires tracking and honesty. Only use with contractors who can show you their Angi spend so you can verify.

GUARANTEE 04

"Win Your First Job in 14 Days or We Set Up Your Google Ads For Free"

7/10

If you don't win at least one job through QuackQuotes within 14 days of your profile going live, we will personally set up a Google Business Profile optimization for your company at no cost. This type of guarantee, called a "service guarantee" by Hormozi, adds a bonus that has real perceived value even though the cost to deliver it is low. Google profile optimization takes 2 hours and helps the contractor regardless of whether they stay on the platform.

Risk to QuackQuotes: Low. The cost to deliver is time only. Great to use during launch when ad volume is still building and you cannot yet reliably promise job volume.

HOW TO STACK THESE

In every ad: lead with Guarantee 01. It is your hook, your headline, and your close all in one. In the body script: reinforce it by saying it a second time in different words. On the landing page: show it in bold above the form. In sales conversations: use Guarantee 02 or 03 depending on how skeptical the contractor is. The goal is to make them feel like they would be leaving money on the table by not joining.

Targeting Strategy

Broad targeting with a general landing page vs. niche-specific ads. Here is the honest answer.

OPTION A

Broad "Home Service Businesses" Ad

- Larger addressable audience in Meta
- One ad to run instead of many
- Landing page asks what niche they are in
- Lower creative production cost

The problem: A pest control owner scrolling Facebook stops when they see "pest control." They do not stop for "home service businesses." Generic ads get skipped. The landing page cannot fix a weak hook.

OPTION B (RECOMMENDED)

Niche-Specific Ads per Service Type

- Hook speaks directly to the person watching
- Far higher stop-rate and click-through
- Lower CPL because relevance is high
- Each ad goes to a niche-specific or general landing page
- Easy to test which niche converts cheapest

Start with pest control ads. Once that is converting, add gutter cleaning, then junk removal. Scale what works.

Landing Page Recommendation

One universal landing page is fine as long as the headline matches the niche in the ad. Use URL parameters or separate landing pages per niche. The form can ask "What type of home service do you provide?" as the first field so you capture the niche data without needing 10 separate pages. The critical thing is that the first thing they see on the landing page matches exactly what the ad told them they would find.

SECTION 06

UGC Ad Scripts — Pest Control

Targeting pest control business owners in Raleigh-Durham on Meta. Built on Hormozi's hook framework: 47.9% statements, 21.5% commands. Lead with pain or a bold claim. Never explain the product in the hook. Make them say "that is me."

Hooks — Statement Type (Highest Performing)

HOOK 1 — SITUATION MIRROR

You run a pest control company in Raleigh and your phone should be ringing more than it is.

You do great work. You show up on time. You just have no idea how to get in front of the people who need you right now.

That is the only thing we fix.

HOOK 2 — PROVOCATIVE CLAIM

Raleigh homeowners searched for pest control over ten thousand times last month.

How many of those searches found your business?

If the answer is not enough, keep watching.

HOOK 3 — VILLAIN FRAME

You know what kills more pest control businesses in Raleigh than bad service?

Bad marketing.

Specifically, paying $50 to $100 per lead to Angi for customers who already called four other companies before they got to you.

There is a way to stop doing that.

Hooks — Command Type

HOOK 4 — STORY DROP

I was talking to a pest control operator in Raleigh last week.

He was spending $600 a month on Angi. Winning maybe two jobs from it.

That is $300 per customer before he even showed up to the job.

He switched to QuackQuotes. He only pays when he wins. I want to show you how.

HOOK 5 — CONTRAST GUT PUNCH

Your competitor down the road is not better at pest control than you.

They are just better at getting found.

QuackQuotes puts your business in front of the same homeowners they are winning. And you do not pay a cent unless you win the job.

Hooks — Question and Contrast Type

HOOK 6 — CALENDAR QUESTION

Pest control season in Raleigh is here.

Is your calendar full?

If not, it is not your service holding you back. It is your visibility.

We fix that. And you do not pay a dollar unless you win the job.

HOOK 7 — MATH HOOK

Quick math for pest control companies in Raleigh.

Angi: $847 in lead fees last month. Three jobs won. That is $282 per customer before you even showed up.

QuackQuotes: $0 in lead fees last month. Three jobs won. $0 per customer until they paid.

Same jobs. Different model.

Body Script — Pest Control

Here is the actual problem with Angi and Thumbtack.

You pay for a lead upfront. Then you race to call the homeowner before four other companies do. The fastest caller wins, not the best company. And you still paid whether you won or lost.

That model is designed to make them money. Not you.

QuackQuotes works completely differently.

We run targeted ads in Raleigh-Durham. When a homeowner needs pest control, they submit a job request through our platform. That request goes out to a small group of local operators including you.

Here is the part that changes everything. The homeowner does not get five companies calling their phone at once. Instead, they receive one single form with every contractor's quote laid out side by side. Your photo. Your price. Your Google reviews. And a personal note you wrote directly to them.

The homeowner reads every quote at their own pace and picks the one they trust most.

You are not competing on who called first. You are competing on who looks most trustworthy. That is a competition you can actually win on your own merits.

Once the customer picks you, QuackQuotes handles the rest. Scheduling, reminders, and payment all go through the platform. You show up, do the job, and get paid. We only take a small percentage when you win. Nothing before that. Ever.

On top of that, every completed job triggers an automatic text to the customer asking for a Google review linked directly to your profile. You build your reputation on autopilot with every single job.

Click below. Set up your profile in five minutes. It costs you nothing until you win your first job.

SECTION 07

UGC Ad Scripts — Gutter Cleaning and Junk Removal

Same framework applied to secondary launch niches. Shorter hook sets since these run after pest control is proven.

Gutter Cleaning Hooks

HOOK 1 — SITUATION MIRROR

You run a gutter cleaning company in Raleigh and fall is coming fast.

Every home on every street you drive past needs cleaning in the next sixty days.

You just cannot get in front of the people who own them.

That is the problem we solve.

HOOK 2 — MATH HOOK

There are over 200,000 single-family homes in Raleigh-Durham.

Every single one needs their gutters cleaned at least twice a year.

That is 400,000 jobs available every year in this market alone.

How many of them are finding you right now?

HOOK 3 — VILLAIN FRAME

The gutter cleaning company winning in your zip code is not better than you.

They just showed up on one homeowner's Facebook feed at the right time.

We can make that homeowner find you instead. And you pay us nothing unless you win the job.

Gutter Cleaning Body Script

Here is what most gutter cleaning operators in Raleigh do not realize.

The demand is already there. Raleigh has one of the highest tree coverages in the southeast. Most homes need cleaning twice a year minimum. The jobs exist. The homeowners just cannot find a company they trust.

That is the entire problem. And that is what QuackQuotes fixes.

We run paid ads targeting Raleigh-Durham homeowners who need gutter cleaning right now. When they submit a job request, it goes out to a small group of local operators including you. Every contractor submits a quote with their price, their photo, a link to their Google reviews, and a personal note written directly to that homeowner.

The homeowner gets one single form with every quote laid out side by side. They read them on their own time. They pick the company they trust most. No phone race. No pressure. Just a level playing field where the best-looking operator wins.

Once they choose you, QuackQuotes handles scheduling, reminders, and payment end to end. You show up, clean the gutters, and get paid through the platform.

We take a small percentage after the customer pays you. Before that, you owe us nothing. No monthly fee. No cost per lead. No subscription. Zero dollars until you win.

Every completed job also triggers an automatic review request to the customer, linked directly to your Google page. You build your reputation on autopilot with every single job you finish.

Click below. Five minutes to set up. Nothing to pay until you win your first job.

Junk Removal Hooks

HOOK 1 – VILLAIN FRAME

1-800-GOT-JUNK spends $50 million a year in advertising so they can take jobs that should be going to local operators in Raleigh.

They are not better at removing junk than you.

They are just better at getting found.

We fix that.

HOOK 2 – STORY DROP

A junk removal guy in Raleigh told me he was losing three or four jobs a week to a national chain.

Same neighborhood. Same type of job. But their trucks kept showing up and his phone stayed quiet.

He joined QuackQuotes. He started winning those exact same jobs the next month.

Here is what changed.

Junk Removal Body Script

The junk removal market in Raleigh is worth millions. And right now it goes almost entirely to national chains, not because they do better work, but because they are the only ones showing up in front of homeowners when they need help.

Local operators do better work at better prices. They just never get the chance to prove it.

QuackQuotes changes that.

We run targeted ads in Raleigh-Durham for homeowners who need junk removed. When they submit a request, it goes out to a group of local operators. Every contractor submits a quote with their price, their photo, their Google reviews, and a personal note to that homeowner.

The homeowner gets one form. Every quote side by side. They pick the company they feel most confident in. You are not competing against a million-dollar ad budget. You are competing on trust, price, and reputation. That is a fight you can win.

Once the customer picks you, QuackQuotes handles the scheduling and payment. You show up, remove the junk, get paid through the platform. We take a small cut after the customer pays you. Not before. Never before.

No upfront fees. No cost per lead. No risk of paying for jobs you did not win.

QuackQuotes

Angi charges you $50-$100 per lead.

Win or lose. Whether the homeowner answers or not.

QuackQuotes charges you nothing until you win the job and the customer pays you.

Here is the difference:

1. We run ads in Raleigh targeting homeowners who need pest control right now
2. Homeowners submit a job request and get one form — every local contractor's quote side by side, with your photo, your price, your reviews, and a note from you
3. They pick you based on trust and price, not who called first
4. We handle scheduling and payment end to end once they choose
5. You win and get paid? We take a small percentage. You lose? You owe us nothing.
6. Every job you complete automatically sends the customer a review request to your Google page

Niche Swap Instructions

Change line 1 ("Pest Control Owners") and the niche references in the body to match: gutter cleaning, junk removal, or pressure washing. Keep the Angi comparison, the commission structure, and the "first 3 jobs free" line identical across all versions. Test all four niches simultaneously in separate ad sets with a $10-$15 per day budget each. In 7-10 days you will know which niche produces the cheapest contractor signup. Double down on that niche first.
